Ready for Our Close-up

The Morningside campus makes a cameo this winter in The Post, Steven Spielberg’s drama about the journalists who published the Pentagon Papers. Can you name these other movies in which Columbia steals the scene?

By Julia Joy  |  Winter 2017

This Woody Allen movie won the 1987 Academy Award for best original screenplay.
In this 1996 rom-com, Barbara Streisand plays Rose Morgan, a lovelorn Columbia English professor.

This 2007 comedy stars Scarlett Johansson as a recent college graduate who gets a job with a wealthy Manhattan family.
In this 1984 blockbuster, parapsychology is an area of study.
This 2002 action flick opens with a class field trip to a genetics lab, which leads to a tangled web of intrigue.
Will Smith is a professional “date doctor” in this 2005 comedy. Naturally, there’s a catch.
A Columbia PhD student races to class in this 1976 thriller starring Dustin Hoffman and Sir Laurence Olivier.
William Hurt made his debut in this 1980 film, playing a professor who experiments with hallucinogenic drugs.
Julianne Moore plays a Columbia linguist who receives a devastating diagnosis in this 2014 drama.
Answers, from top: Hannah and Her Sisters, The Mirror Has Two Faces, The Nanny Diaries, Ghostbusters, Spider-man, Hitch, Marathon Man, Altered States, Still Alice

Read more on:
Arts & Humanities
All categories >

Julia Joy

Read more from Julia Joy